Detailed Announcement

- European Innovation Academy reported that 100 international teams participated in its Porto 2023 program and that the ten highest-scoring teams were selected for final recognition.
- BreastScreening-AI was included among those top teams and received consulting support together with access to a fast-track application pathway for an external accelerator.
- The program required teams to develop and validate a venture proposition, establish a business model, build a prototype or minimum viable product, and present to an investor panel.
- The recognition relates to the project team's performance within the program and does not constitute customer validation, clinical validation, investment, or regulatory authorization.

Investor Relevance

The recognition provides early external evidence of venture-development capability, founder execution, and the ability to communicate the BreastScreening-AI proposition in an international entrepreneurial setting. It should be treated as an ecosystem and team-development milestone rather than commercial traction.
